

Oxford, United Kingdom [4th September 2008]

Press Release: The Oxford Knowledge Company is awarded fifth Microsoft competency: Unified Communications Solutions

The Oxford Knowledge Company develops skill-set further with award of fifth coveted Microsoft Competency

The Oxford Knowledge Company, the leading Oxford based IT consultancy and outsourcing provider, is pleased to announce that it has been awarded a fifth Microsoft competency focussing on unified communications solutions, enabling its clients to streamline their information exchange irrespective of place and space.

Microsoft Unified Communications technologies help streamline communications between people and organizations, regardless of medium, platform, device, or location. Having now attained the Unified Communications Solutions competency, the Oxford Knowledge Company holds formally recognised skills in the planning, deploying and management of email solutions and calendaring, presence and instant messaging (IM), unified messaging, Voice over Internet Protocol (VoIP) call management, and audio-video-Web conferencing. All using Microsoft Unified Communications technologies, including Microsoft Exchange Server and Microsoft Office Communications Server.

Media contact: Alistair Holt, +44 (0)1865 322100

About the Oxford Knowledge Company

The Oxford Knowledge Company works with small and medium sized businesses local to Oxford or larger organisations with satellite offices in the region to provide advice, technology support and maintenance. For some organisations this means serving as the outsourced IT department: providing advice; installing computer systems; performing regular preventative maintenance - all to ensure the smooth running of their businesses. For others it means complementing the in-house team: in a strategic consultancy role, to fill skills gaps; to provide extra resources as required. For all clients it means understanding their long term business objectives and designing technology solutions that will enable them to reach these as their businesses grow, underpinned by a technology solution that will adapt with them. The Oxford Knowledge Company maintains reassuringly high standards with a highly personable team developed through its long term commitment to excellence. These high standards are demonstrated through Investors In People and Microsoft Gold Certified Partner Programme awards. For more information, please visit www.oxford-knowledge.com or call 01865 322100.